The World as Classroom

Students spend four months exploring options and choosing a twelve-week individual internship from over 6,300 opportunities in 126 countries. The internship is focused on service work, career exploration, language acquisition, and learning job skills specific to a field of developing interest. This twelve-week independent journey exposes the student to diverse cultures, broadens their horizons, and deepens their understanding of diverse worldviews. Each student focuses on being a voice for positive change at the juncture where their deep gladness meets the world’s need. Working independently in the world for three months allows each student to identify and work with their strengths and challenges in the areas of work ethic, personal motivation, and self-presentation. Successful completion of this course satisfies the COR220 Community-based Learning and Action Core Seminar requirement.

Course Number: LCOR155
Unit: 4.0
Program: Naropa Core Curriculum