

Research Methods and Statistics

This course introduces statistical analysis and research methods used to test theories within psychological science. Students learn the most common techniques for describing data and making inferences in psychological research. Students learn to develop research questions; design rigorous and ethically sound experiments; and collect, analyze, and interpret data. Prerequisite: PSYB101.

Course Number: PSYB301

Unit: 3.0

Program: UNDG Contemplative Psych