Writing Workshop: Writers in Community

This is a required cohort class for Creative Writing and Literature BA students. The course engages several aspects of being a writer, including performance, innovative poetic concerns, and contemplative practices. Several working writers give in-class lectures and/or lead workshops, and students are required to attend the What Where series readings on Tuesday night four times during the semester. Students explore contemplative gestures and writing processes. Prerequisite: 3 credits of 300-level course work.
